From the Round Table.
SHODDY.

I.
Terrible times of sorrow and need;
Times to make hearts of adamant bleed;
Times that seem to have been decreed
To chasten our wayward nation.
Fathers and brothers thinking away;
Bread growing scarcer every day;
Famine to pinch and sword to slay—
'Tis a woeful situation.

II.
Between us Nero, in days of old,
Unmoved, heard Rhine from bells tolled,
And saw the "war-himms" that rattled and rolled
To the scene of the great disaster;
The while to roined his fiddle-bow,
And played some classic "Rob Ringle, Oh!"
So we make merry while all things go
To the dickens, faster and faster!

III.
Parties, soirees, visits and calls,
Opeas, hops, and Russian balls,
Mid broken pillars and tottering walls,
Enough to bewilder a body;
Silver and gold, and gems of the mine,
Satin to rustle and silk to shine,
Feather and fuff, and frizzly finc—
The paraphernalia of Shoddy!

IV.
Carriages flash through the crowded street,
Flankeys in livery stiff on each seat,
Bustled and caped from head to feet—
Most solemn, majestic flunkies;
And "tiffers" to lead down the steps with a bow,
Learned only tigers, and heaven knows how,
Dressed up in a fashion, I must allow,
Like that of the organ monkeys.

V.
The ladies who walk when the weather is fair,
Show marvelous tastes with a marvelous air;
Nothing can be too splendid to wear,
Too gaudy, too fine, or too funny;
For credit is good, if prices are high,
And a government nod or wink of the eye
Can pile up "Greenbacks" clear to the sky—
"Greenback" being Shoddy for Money.

VI.
So yellows and blues and scarlets gay
Go sweeping the pavements every day,
Making a rainbow of poor Broadway,
With a glare that is really stunning;
And even the churches, where fashion goes,
Are a mass of follies and furbelows,
Flirtation and foolery under the rose
Past even the Serpents' cunning.

VII.
While Shoddy ever its turtle gloats,
Our soldiers shiver in rotten coats,
And our tars go down in their leaky boats,
The victims of contract building;
And Poverty starves in its wretched slums,
Or freezes to death when the North wind comes,
While Shoddy is picking the sweetest plums
From its bed of greenback gilding.

VIII.
Bat what cares Shoddy for all these things?
Shoddy, the richest of paper kings;
Shoddy, who dances, flirts and sings
On the crater of wild inflation!
What does he care? Not a sou marquee!
He fattens and bloats in luxury,
As if his reign were a thing to be
Of eternal perpetuity.

IX.
Bat Dumocles' sword hangs overhead;
Justice may sleep, but she is not dead,
"Vengeance is mine" the Lord hath said,
And soon, at the end of the story,
Fattest wine shall be bitterest gall,
SHK and satin make shroud and pall,
Truth shall arise and Shoddy shall fall,
To the nations lasting glory!

X.
An Irishman's repartee is generally like himself—pat.

on the lookout. If you would find them in still greater abundance, be on the look-in.

XI.
A woman likes heads around her neck; a

"Tommy, what does he-o-o-o-o-o spell?"
"Don't know, ma'am." "What, you little

FANNY.

How Miss Warren got a Husband.

CHAPTER I.—CONFIDENTIAL.

Now cousin Alf, do throw away that everlasting book, and condescend for a few moments to listen to a poor mortal like me. So saying, Fanny Warren approached the lounge on which her cousin Alf lay stretched at full length, with one hand fair and white as a lady's, half buried in the masses of dark hair that covered his head, while the other supported a book, which to all appearance completely absorbed his five senses, and shaking him by the shoulder, she continued, come, don't you hear?

Well, Fan, what is wanting now? said Alf, lazily raising his eyes from the book. I want, answered Fanny, to talk, and I want you to listen. Well, talk away, then, and I'll listen with all my ears, said Alf, casting a longing look at the book.

I wouldn't give that, replied Fanny, snapping her fingers by way of illustration, for all the attention I shall get as long as that book is in your hand, so give it to me.

Alf reluctantly gave up his book, exclaiming as he did so, what tyrants women are, and then shaking the cushions and placing his head in a comfortable position on one of them, he threw the other at the foot of the lounge, and kicking off his slippers, he laid his feet on that. After all this was settled to his satisfaction, he gave a yawn extraordinary for its length, and then said, Please, proceed and your humble servant will render all attention.

Fanny drew a small rocking chair by the side of the lounge, and seated herself in it, saying, you know yourself that for the past three years I have attended bills, parties and scores, have sung, flirted and jilted men by the dozen, have made and received numberless calls, and all this has amounted to just nothing. Well, now, I am about to turn over a new leaf, in short, I have determined to get married.

Whew, said Alf, uttering a prolonged whistle, and raising himself on his elbow, so that he could conveniently look his cousin in the face, adding with a serio comic expression, I hope in all mercy you have no designs upon my liberty.

You, said Fanny smiling, I wouldn't take you as a present.

Wouldn't he? said Alf laying his head back on the cushion, well, that is the most cruel speech I have heard for a week. Here I am, Alfred Sinclair, with a fine prospect of having presently an M. D. attached to my name; I have also twelve and a half cents in my pocket. As for personal charms, I am six feet without my slippers, and of fine figure, don't you think so, Fan? and then such killing black eyes, black hair, good teeth, and moreover I am going to cultivate a splendid moustache. If you would not take me as a present, what will the rest do? Oh, dear, what is to become of me, with that Alf gave vent to a terrible groan, and covered his face with his hands, while Fanny laughingly pulled his ear, and bade him stop his nonsense and hear what she had to say.

Presently Alf allowed his hands to drop from his face, and looking up with an air of strange drollery on his fair features, he said, Is your destined husband aware of your charitable intentions?

No, answered Fanny, I have not even spoken to him yet. I shall require your services first.

My services, said Alf, growing interested, what in the name of conscience have I to do with the matter? You needn't think I'll be made an instrument for the purpose of executing any of your wicked designs, but who is to be the fortunate individual?

Well, it's that gentleman I saw you talking with on the church steps as we came out last Sabbath afternoon.

What, Dr. Cuthbert?

Yes, the same.

How did you know anything about him?

thing, but I will say that I wish you was in Canada.

What, wish me to Canada when I am going to introduce you to Dr. Cuthbert this afternoon, and do anything else that I can to make you both happy and place yourself under everlasting obligations to me.

I don't want to be under everlasting obligations to you, said Fanny pouting, as she rose to leave the room.

Come back, Fan, come back; you know it's natural for the Sinclairs to delight in teasing, and belonging to them as I do, how could I help teasing you just a little? Don't leave me in despair for having offended you, for if you do when you return you will find the room flooded and the only earthly remains of Alf Sinclair will be hair and a few finger nails, for I shall be disheveled in tears, and Alf caught Fanny's hand as she was passing and sealed her on the lounge beside him notwithstanding her remonstrances. Fanny endeavored to look grave and displeased but did not succeed very well, and after a few moments without observing the childish smile on Alf's lip, she went on chatting as lively as ever.

In a short time the arrangements with regard to the time and place for the afternoon's ride were made, and Fanny declaring that she absolutely must go, left the room.

As the door closed after her, Alf resumed his old position on the lounge, but had apparently forgotten the existence of his book which lay neglected by his side. He ran his fingers meditatively through his hair a few times and then broke into a hearty laugh, exclaiming that will be capital. Springing up from the lounge he put on his slippers, and going into the hall he took his hat and passed into the street, with a highly amused expression curling his lips, and a world of mirthfulness in his dark eyes that threatened something.

CHAPTER II.—THE RIDE.

At the hour appointed, the horses were brought around the door and Alf stood in the hall, hat in hand, waiting for Fanny to make her appearance. Presently she came, looking as fresh and beautiful as the rose bud in her riding habit, which Alf thought decidedly becoming; in fact, he told her so, just as if she was not already aware of it. She gave him in return for his compliment, one of her sweetest smiles and they were soon galloping down the road toward the sea-shore, where they intended to ride for an hour or two along the cool beach. The day was fine and they were both in excellent spirits, but Fanny, much to Alf's amusement, would occasionally cast a furtive glance around to see if her intended husband was in sight.

After riding as far as Alf thought necessary, they turned their horses' heads homeward, and Fanny, looking ahead, discovered a gentleman approaching, whom Alf said was Dr. Cuthbert.

Fanny smoothed down her collar and gloves, adjusted her riding skirt, and then, and then appeared to be suddenly interested in a description Alf was giving of some curious sea-shells he had seen in India, so, of course Dr. Cuthbert had no reason to suppose that she had previously observed him. When they met Alf presented his cousin, and they stood for some time talking of the weather, the beauty of the scenery, &c. As they turned to leave him, Fanny invited him to call and see them, and as Alf thought it probable that he should be absent the next day, he urged him to call that evening, which the Dr. agreed to do.

While they slowly along for some time without speaking, then Alf asked her how she liked her future life partner?

In truth Fanny liked him very much, but she did not choose to say that she did, as she found fault with his dress and appearance, indeed, criticized rather severely, as is customary for young ladies to do under like circumstances. Alf appeared to enjoy all this highly, and then became very grave, and when Fanny inquired the cause, he replied that he was wondering how long it would be before some young lady would decide to marry him. He wouldn't care so much if she was young, wealthy, pretty and sweet tempered; but he would like it would be some one who had outlived the days of poetry and romance, and was as Shakespeare says, sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, and sans everything, whalebone, ottoman, paint and powder excepted. Indeed he began to have woful visions of bread and butter, Irish help, crying babies, broken crockery, washing days and milliners bills. But if such was to be his fate, he must resign himself submissively, and with the best grace possible bidding farewell to the glorious freedom of bachelorhood, for if a lady determined to marry a man now-a-days, there was no help for him, he might as well think of vanquishing a tropical tornado by struggling with it.

Fanny thought he next best thing to do was to make himself as agreeable as possible, for nobody would ever like Alf Sinclair well enough to take pity on him, therefore releasing him of the honors of single life.

By this time they had reached home, and as it was late, Fanny retired to dress for tea.

After tea was over Alf suddenly recollected that he had an engagement down street that must be fulfilled. He regretted it exceedingly but would endeavor to be back in season to see the doctor; however, as he was not to see him till tomorrow he made up his mind to do so.

Fanny agreed to do as he requested, secretly hoping he would not return, for it would be interesting to her Dr. Cuthbert's sole entertainer such a beautiful evening as that promised to be. It was almost as light as day, so she had the gas extinguished, the blinds thrown back and the windows opened, so that the full rays of the moon came in flooding the room with its soft, silvery light, and Fanny, dressed in white, with the beautiful golden curls around her neck and face, looked as fair and delicate as the moonlight itself.

The Doctor said it was of no consequence and that he could see him at some other time just as well. The Doctor's call was much longer than was necessary, or fashionable, but who does not know that moonlight evenings under such circumstances pass very swiftly; of course he had no idea that it was so late.

Fanny had pleasant dreams that night, for there were floating through her brain visions of bridal favors, splendid dresses and elegant hats that would be the envy of the entire town; and she thought, too, how great would be the triumph of making the man love and marry her who had declared himself a universal woman hater. She had no doubt regarding the matter, for she was sure she had made a decidedly favorable impression. Then she thought how jealous all the young ladies would be when they heard of it, and she hoped soon to have an opportunity of displaying her conquest, but as the Doctor said his sister, Mrs. Wilson, was quite unwell, she was afraid she would not be able to have her party before he left town.

There was something about Dr. Cuthbert that seemed strangely familiar. Indeed, he observed that he thought he must have met her before, for he was sure no two persons could be so much alike. So she dreamed on, continually fancying herself Mrs. Dr. Cuthbert, and dwelling on the happy days before her.

CHAPTER III.—THE RESULT.

The next morning Alf informed his cousin that he should be obliged to leave town for a day or two, and that he had engaged the Doctor to attend to her health meanwhile, and to see that she did not die of loneliness and ennui. Fanny said that she hoped that he would not come, for she thought him very disagreeable, and she could take care of herself.

At this, much to Fanny's vexation, Alf laughed outright, and replied that she must get accustomed to his society, and for long, for that was not at all necessary, she could marry him just as well without, no doubt the wedding cake would taste quite as well as if they were sweetened and otherwise tinged by cupid's arrows.

Dr. Cuthbert, true to his engagement with Alf, called frequently during the latter's absence, which was much longer than he intended it should be. In fact it grew from days to weeks; but he kept up a constant correspondence with Fanny, and as the Doctor was often at the post office he became the bearer of her letters. But for some reason he always came in the evening, and although Fanny told him she greatly deplored her cousin's absence, as it prevented her from taking her customary ride, and endeavored in various ways to hint that his company would be agreeable for a morning or an afternoon ride, he seemed firmly resolved not to be seen with her in public. This Fanny attributed to a sensitiveness regarding the remarks which he had made concerning ladies' society, and his determination never to love or marry; and also to a fear of ridicule when it should be ascertained that he had changed his mind and was actually caught.

Mrs. Wilson recovered and her party came off in great style, but Dr. Cuthbert hated parties and declared he would not be present, but persuaded Fanny to stay at home and allow him the pleasure of her company. It was a little strange, thought Fanny, that none of the young ladies seemed to be aware of his presence in town, or did not even mention his name, but of course envy kept them silent.

Meanwhile the Doctor was very constant in his attentions. He allowed not one evening to pass without seeing her, but as soon as other company was announced he always found it convenient to leave, greatly to Fanny's wonderment and vexation.

One evening, when Fanny thought it was time for him to make a declaration, she sat by the window in the moonlight looking very sentimental and very lovely, with her eyes closed and a long sigh occasionally heaving her bosom. The Doctor drew a chair beside her and commenced talking in that low and singularly melodious tone adapted to the time and occasion. Fanny's hand dropped, (and of course accidentally,) it rested for a minute on the Doctor's arm, he quietly took it up and held it for some time without speaking; at last he said, Miss Warren, I am about to make an explanation which I am well aware I ought to have made long ago, but I trust you will pardon me when you know it was the fear of losing your friendship that prevented me from confessing that which can no longer be deferred. I have called on you often, and, if I am not mistaken, you have approved of and encouraged my visits. Your society possessed a strange fascination for me, but as I feared it might make me miserable, I have longer concealed the truth. I love you, lady, love you as I had resolved never again to love mortal being, but it will bring me only bitterness and misery, for start not, lady, I am already married.

Had an earthquake suddenly opened beneath her feet Fanny would not have been more shocked or surprised, but she gave no manifestation of what was passing within beyond a momentary paleness, and the Doctor continued, saying, some five years since I married a beautiful lady whom, at that time I deeply loved, but from things which I had seen and heard, I supposed her faithless, and in a fit of anger ordered her to leave my house and presence forever, which she quickly did. I should long ago have procured a divorce, but she returned to her father's home in Europe, and I have no means of proving her guilt, and she, out of a desire to torment me, will not release me from the hated thralldom. The Doctor concluded with an impressive silence which lasted for some moments, then Fanny broke the silence by saying, Dr. Cuthbert, I certainly should not have done exactly as I have had I been aware of this before. The only course left for us is to forget the past. I shall always be to you a friend, and I hope ever to consider you as such, and I hope that the pleasant hours that I passed in your company will not be a source of unhappiness to either of us. Under the circumstances I must request you not to call again, believe me, it will be better for us both.

Dr. Cuthbert arose, and in profound sorrow and agitation held her quivering hand a moment, and then bade her farewell forever.

After he was gone Fanny sat down and gave vent to a paroxysm of grief, mortification and anger in a flood of tears. She had begun to love him, but she was more mortified than grieved. Her golden dreams had all vanished, and she thought herself the most ill-used of mortals. Above all what would Alf say when he ascertained the state of affairs, as he certainly would, for she had not been able to keep a secret from him for years, he would tease it from her despite her resolutions to the contrary.

Fanny retired to her room that night, thoroughly miserable, and shed more tears than she had done since the days of her babyhood.

Alf returned next day, but observing how grave and sorrowful Fanny was, although she took great pains to conceal it, he forebore teasing her for a while. But when at last by a few adroit questions, he drew the whole matter from her, his mirth was unbounded. After tormenting her to his heart's content, Alf took pity on her eyes and pocket handkerchief and confessed what a scoundrel he had been, having previously obtained her forgiveness. He said the day they met Dr. Cuthbert on the beach, that he, Dr. Cuthbert, received a telegraphic dispatch summoning him to New York to attend a dangerously sick friend, and he, Alf, resolving to have a little sport at Fanny's expense, persecuted the Doctor in his various visits. For that purpose he spent his time in an adjoining town so that he could easily come and see her evenings. He was really sorry that he had carried the joke so far, but it had been capital fun. He begged a thousand pardons, and then concluded by offering to fill Dr. Cuthbert's place, since the said Doctor was not to be had.

I did not hear Fanny's answer, nor did I know when or where they were married, or what sort of dress the bride wore, but a short time since I met Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair, and they were apparently as happy as clear. Alf, however, has not forgotten his old propensity for teasing, and occasionally calls Mrs. Fanny Cuthbert.

The real Dr. Cuthbert is still wondering who it was that teased him successively, for when he arrived at New York the dangerously sick friend was never in better health and had not the least idea of submitting to pill powder and cruel treatment; and of course Alf does not see fit to reveal how he engaged a gentleman of his acquaintance who was going down to New York in the afternoon train to perform the kindly service for him.

SMART BOY.—A Germaness, accompanied by a boy—some nine or ten years old, entered a clothing store yesterday not far from the Court House, for the purpose of buying some article in that line. The proprietor is a pretty good second hand talker, and apt to spread into a little especially when he has a trade in view. Thinking perhaps he might insure a sale by putting in a few words of soft salder, he commenced the old dodge of praising the boy in the wise:

Is this your fine little boy, madam?

Oh, yaw, he bees mine poy Yaucoo.

Alf! Yes, I might have known it by his resemblance to his mother. A very handsome boy, I declare, a very delicate looking. He has a very feminine look.

WHAT IS GOING ON AT PORT ROYAL—EXTRAORDINARY DEVELOPMENTS—FEDERAL MAGDALEN.—The Administration, in his humane efforts to elevate the character of the Africans and equalize them with white people, two years ago, benevolently sent out from Massachusetts, to Port Royal, South Carolina, at the expense of the whole people of the United States, a few hundred sisters to educate, civilize and refine the contrabands at that place. The New Hampshire Patriot of the 4th of October, gives the result of this very benevolent experiment of Mr. Lincoln in the following paragraph:

"Private advices from Port Royal say that many of the female Abolitionists who went to Port Royal to teach the little niggers how to read and pray, have been obliged, within a few months, to abandon their black charges and open nurseries on their own private account. An officer informed us recently that not less than sixty-four white sisters had contributed to the population in and about Port Royal harbor. The climate seems to favor population even more than the production of Sea Island cotton by paid negro labor.

The information furnished us by the officer concerning the sixty-four little nannies, has been confirmed by the testimony of the Rev. Liberty Billings, Lieutenant Colonel of the First South Carolina Regiment, who is here in consequence of ill health. He says it is a sad truth.

Here, Republicans, is a sweet little morsel for your particular mastication. President Lincoln has used the money of the people to prostitute these Yankee women, with buck niggers, and we may now expect him to provide a grand Magdalen Asylum for them and their woolly paramours. Oh! the morality of this Republican Administration!

Those of our citizens present at the Baptist church in this city, on Sunday evening last, had served up to them a delightful dish of abolition blasphemy. We were not present, thank God, but learn that the speaker who claims to be acting as agent for the "Freedman's Association," said that the great abolitionist above (God) had issued a proclamation declaring that the slaves shall all be free. We suppose old Alf is the prophet of God, through whom he does these wonderful works. Would it not be well to first help the poor whites of the North, who are suffering greater slavery than ever felt by the niggers of the South? Only think of it—the sewing women of New York making flannel shirts, nicely hemmed, felled and stitched, for five cents apiece.

Why don't you send (F) gentlemen travel, and urge the people to send relief to them? Oh! they are white—Canton Ledger.

A VENERABLE MAN.—The Boston Transcript publishes a sketch of Deacon John Phillips, of Sturbridge, Mass., who is now in his one hundred and fourth year. This venerable man was born in Massachusetts, when George II, was King of Great Britain. He was drafted in 1776, and served in the early part of the American Revolution, and has a distinct recollection of the battle of Bunker Hill, which took place when he was fifteen years old. He has lived all his life on one farm, ate at one table, and, during a space of ninety years, has not had a severe sickness.

THE PAY OF SOLDIERS.—The proposition agreed upon by the Democratic Members of Congress at Washington, to support a bill which shall provide for the payment of the soldiers in gold, or its equivalent, seems to be consistent, fair and just. The soldier ought not to suffer by the depreciation of the currency. At the beginning of the war the soldier's thirteen dollars a month was equal to twenty dollars in money to him now. We shall, if the pretended friends of the soldier will vote to make him stand the depreciation, or whether they make his thirteen dollars by handing it over in coin or in its equivalent.—Holmes Co. Farmer.

A babe, not old enough to speak or walk, was creeping on the floor. By and by a bright ray of sunshine fell upon the carpet. Baby saw it, and crept toward the dazzling object. She looked at it, and crept all around it, with the greatest interest in her sweet face, and then putting down her little lips she kissed it. Now was not that beautiful? The bright little sunbeam lighted up joy in her baby-heart, and she expressed that joy with a sweet kiss.

The will of Elias Boudinot, of New Jersey, made a number of years ago, but just sent to the office of the Recorder of Deeds, in Philadelphia, contains the following curious item: "I give to the managers of the New Jersey Bible Society $200, to be laid out in the purchase of peacocks, to be given by them to poor old people, it being in vain to give a bible to those who cannot find the means of reading it."

There is no devil like an enemy to power, no damnation like being poor, no hell like an empty purse.

A cross old man says women take almost as much time to making up their mind as they do to make up their bodies.

HOMER'S MEN.—In the eastern part of Ohio there resides a man named Brown, now a justice of the peace, and a very sensible man, but, by common consent, the neglectful individual in the West, being long, gangare, shallow and awry, with a gait like a kangaroo. One day he was walking and on one of the mountain roads he met a man on foot alone, who was longer, gangier, by all odds, than himself. He could give the sapling fifty and then beat him. Without saying a word, Brown raised his gun and deliberately leveled it at the stranger. For God's sake, don't shoot! shouted the man in alarm. Stranger, replied Brown, I swore ten years ago that if I ever met a man uglier than I was, I'd shoot him, and you are the first one I've seen. The stranger, after taking a careful survey of his rival, remarked, Well, captain, if I look any worse than you do, shoot; I don't want to live any longer.

MAYSVILLE, FEBRUARY 11, 1864.

Post Masters of Maysville.

Editors of the Bulletin.
GENTLEMEN: I send you a list of the names of those persons who have occupied the office of Postmaster in the City of Mayville since its organization:

GEORGE MITCHELL was the first Postmaster, and resigned in 1793.

EDMUND MARTIN succeeded him and held the office until 1801 or 1802, when he resigned.

MOSES DAULTON was then appointed, and resigned in 1809 or 1810.

JOHN ROK occupied the office until about 1824.

WILLIAM MURPHY succeeded him and died in office.

MAURICE LANGHORNE was then appointed, served some years and was removed upon political grounds.

THOMAS MARSHALL was his successor and resigned.

NICHOLAS D. COLEMAN next held the office and resigned in 1834.

JAMES C. COLEMAN succeeded him and was removed in 1841 for political reasons.

JAMES W. COBURN next occupied the office and was removed in 1845 for political reasons.

RICHARD H. STANTON succeeded him, and was removed for political reasons in 1849.

ELI D. ANDERSON was then appointed, and for political reasons removed in 1853.

WM. S. PICKETT succeeded him and died in office.

BENJAMIN O. PICKETT was his successor and was removed for political reasons in 1861.

JAMES MONROE STOCKTON is the present incumbent of the office.

Of these gentlemen five only are now living. All the earlier Postmasters lived to a good old age, and have left numerous descendants, who are known as among our most respectable citizens. Thomas Marshall became a Brigadier General in the Mexican war and served with credit. Mr. Coleman and Mr. Stanton both represented the District in the Congress of the United States.

It would be interesting to many of your readers, if some old citizen, familiar with the lives and characters of the earlier Postmasters, would furnish you with brief biographical sketches of them. They lived here at the most interesting period in the history of our town, some of them when the native Indian had not yet disappeared from the neighboring forests. Yours &c.

THE PRODUCTIVNESS of the California mines has wonderfully increased during the past year. It is estimated that $52,500,000 in treasure have arrived in San Francisco. Of this amount $212,000,000 came from Washoe, $5,000,000 from Oregon, Idaho, Washington, and British Columbia, $2,000,000 from Mexico, and the balance from California. Her exports of treasure, as shown by the manifest of steamers and sailing vessels were $96,000,000, of which $28,500,000 went direct to England, $4,000,000 to China, and $2,000,000 to Mexico.

It is reported that Iowa has furnished 2,000 men more than her quota.

Gov. Pierpont and his Legislature have protested against Gen. Butler's operations at Norfolk. Butler must have been acting more 'heavily' than usual, thus to receive the disapprobation of 'loyalists.'

Hilo, one of the Sandwich Island Group, produced ten million pounds of sugar last year; one plantation alone netting 800,000 pounds.

General Polk is at Brandon, Miss., in the absence of Joe Johnston. Forrest lately moved west of Holly Springs with three or four thousand men. He has sent as many men south to be armed. Ferguson is in command at Luxahoma and Sardis, with twenty-two hundred followers.

An "intelligent printer," lately from Richmond, informs the New York Times that the rebels will astonish us in the spring with the number and effectiveness of the troops. Lee's army has not received many reinforcements, but Johnston's army in the southwest is being heavily augmented by conscription.

From the Georgetown Ohio Argus.

HUNTINGTON TOWNSHIP.—However much the Democracy of Brown County were surprised at the result of the election in old Huntington last October, they will be truly gratified to learn that she has redeemed herself. In a recent election, for the office of Justice of the Peace, the candidate of the "Broughers" were handsomely beaten.

Some of those who contemplate "Union," will especially rejoice at the re-election of that "greatest Union man living," Thomas Shelton, Esq. As everybody has heard of this gentleman, a brief notice of him would not, perhaps, be uninteresting. He was born in the County of Fauquier, Va., in 1776, and is now about 88 years of age. He came to Ohio about 50 years ago, and has held the office of Justice of the Peace for 48 years; and, during that time, he has married over 2500 couples. He voted for Jackson in 1828, and for Vallandigham in 1863; and he never experienced a defeat for office in his life. Who can beat that?

The Ohio House of Representatives has adopted a resolution to sell the $70,000 coin in the State Treasury at sixty cents premium;

Tableaux in Mayville.

Our community are greatly indebted to the Tableau Society, under the successful management of the accomplished Mr. ALBERT, for one of the most tasteful, elegant and brilliant entertainments which has ever been witnessed in our City. The Tableau Society is composed of a number of the most lovely and accomplished ladies and public-spirited young gentlemen of the City, organized for the commendable purpose of securing funds to pay off the debt incurred for the Nativity School Building, connected with the Episcopal Church in Mayville. Well and creditably indeed, have they met the public expectation, not a word of dissent having been heard from the universal expression of pleasure and approbation with which their tasteful and classic delineations have been received.

Considering the utter want of experience by almost all the members of the Society, the elegant arrangement of the properties, the fine conception of the characters, the graceful positions, the tasteful draping of the figures, and the perfect harmony of the whole, was a matter of wonder and admiration to all who witnessed the beautiful representations. Some of the scenes were transcendently elegant and effective, and we speak in no terms of extravagant praise, when we say they would have extorted applause from any audience, of no matter what critical taste, cultivation or refinement. We have witnessed many representations of the kind, by accomplished artists, but have never seen any that surpassed these, for correctness of delineation and perfection of taste.

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST was a gorgeous representation of that remarkable scriptural event, and seemed to bring to the gaze of the spectator every personage and incident connected therewith, as natural as life itself. The King, the Queen, the Guests, the Wise men, the Prophet Daniel, the Writing of fire, were all happily conceived and admirably represented.

THE DANCING GIRL IN REPOSE and the ENCHANTED PRINCESS, defy our powers of description. Nothing could have been more charming. No artist has ever yet produced upon canvas more beautiful and glowing pictures.

THE DEATH OF EDITH, the GUARDIAN ANGEL and the SPIRIT OF RELIGION, were equally beautiful, though more spiritual and grave, and elicited unbounded admiration.

THE SCULPTOR'S STUDIO, so exquisitely classic, was, perhaps, as much admired as any other piece in either of the programmes. It represented the great American Artist, Hiram Powers, whose fame is not bounded by our own continent, in his studio, surrounded by some of his finished and unfinished works, giving the last graceful touches to the greatest of all his noble achievements, the statue of Liberty, recently elevated to its position on the Dome of the new Capitol at Washington City. To convert the warm breathing life of the lovely young ladies who represented the statuary into apparent stone, and to arrange drapery so as so perfectly to resemble cold marble, required, perhaps, as much genius and artistic taste, as any other part of the labors of those engaged in these elegant representations. The most fastidious critic would have searched in vain to find any defects, in the arrangement of the figures, their positions, or drapery. Hiram Powers would have recognized in his representative (and namesake) an almost life-like figure of himself, with his blouse and cap, mallet and chisel, and other accompaniments of a disordered studio.

MERCY'S DREAM, THE GRACES, THE SEASONS, and many other pieces selected with like good taste, were capitally represented, but they were too numerous for special description.

The Tableaux of PEACE was a great favorite, and drew from the immense audience unrestrained bursts of admiration. It was represented by many characters, and afforded a fine field for the display of every variety of artistic delineation. If it were not invidious we could describe some of the features of the scene so much like life itself, that the representative of the character might well have been mistaken for the character himself. A bank officer who figured in the piece, personated a blacksmith so accurately, as to be really mistaken for a worthy and well known gentleman of the neighborhood belonging to that craft.

THE BRIDAL SCENE and TAKING THE VEIL are well associated, and were touchingly beautiful. The Managers seem to have arranged these pieces for the most striking effect, and succeeded wonderfully in arousing the sympathetic emotions of the audience. No one could have witnessed with indifference these exquisitely beautiful scenes.

The comic tableaux alone remain to be noticed. JONATHAN ON A VISIT TO HIS CITY COUSIN was done up in most masterly style, and convulsed the audience with repeated explosions of mirth. But the great event in this branch of the entertainment was THE SHOEMAKER IN LOVE. Mr. O. and Miss W. certainly maintained the characters of Mr. and Mrs. Healtap with wonderful fidelity, and well merited the rapturous applause which succeeded each representation. We hope Mr. Healtap has suffered no serious effect from the free use which Mrs. Healtap made of her broom, at the closing of the scene.

The entertainment continued for three nights without the slightest abatement of the interest which the audience manifested in the various representations, and we are gratified to learn that the laudable efforts of the society have been substantially rewarded, the aggregate receipts exceeding six hundred dollars. Mr. ALBERT and Mr. RICHARDSON, and several lady and gentleman assistants, who deserve a more special notice, have entitled themselves to the gratitude of all to whose pleasure they have contributed by these intellectual and refined exhibitions. The interest of each performance was greatly heightened by the musical contributions of Mr. ALBERT and the beautiful and accomplished Miss BLANDEY, whose sweet and highly cultivated voice charmed the listening audience, and drew forth repeated manifestations of admiration.

The execution, in an exquisite style, of several difficult pieces from the most popular operas by the Misses A. and M. P. gave a delightful variety to the musical department.

The Liberty String Band with commendable generosity, gratuitously contributed their services, and entertained the audiences upon two of the evenings with many well executed performances.

So successful was this experiment of entertaining the community with an exhibition of living pictures, and so completely was the public expectation realized, that very great desire was manifested to have them repeated this week. The Society would cheerfully have done so, as great as would have been the tax upon their time and physical endurance, if the use of the Court House could have been obtained, with due regard to the convenience of the Court, which held its monthly term on Monday, and made necessary the removal of the staging, scenery, &c.

We are gratified to learn that the Society has not disbanded, as the object for which it was organized has not been fully accomplished, and that we may indulge the expectation of a repetition of their entertainment early in the Spring.

Here are bold and out-spoken words from the Chicago Times. Referring to test oaths; furloughs, and other Republican machinery of fraud, the Times says: "The people will not submit to the reputation of such fraud and tyranny they ought not to submit. So surely as the day of election will come to the separate States, so surely must the election be fairly conducted, or there will be civil war in the North. There will be civil war, with proportions so vast and awful that the boldest will turn from its contemplation, as the disheveled soul recoils from the vision of hell."

COWARDICE.—The crims of the hour (truly) and forcibly remarks the Columbus (Ohio) Herald—mawkish, puling cowardice, sneaking policy and expediency, when the life of a nation and the liberties of a great people are all at stake. History may in some cases respect the tyrant for his boldness, his daring and his success, but the sneaking varmin who crawl upon their bellies, serpent-like, to kiss the tyrant's heels or hide from his ignominious frowns, are always held in contempt and damned with the anathemas of ages.

CLERICAL DEPRAVITY.—Ravens and Theopiles Packard resident at Monteno, Kanakoo county, has lately been proved to have confined his wife as a lunatic for three years past. A part of that time she had been in the asylum at Jacksonville, and the remainder, she has been locked in her own room of the house of her husband. A writ of habeas corpus was obtained in her case and an examination had before Hon. C. R. Starr, when the facts above stated were elicited, and various other tendentious treatment. The development of this case was hastened by the discovery of a plot to remove her to an eastern asylum, which, if she had entered, would probably never have opened to allow her egress. The Reverend rascal, who is understood to be unconditionally loyal, has gone to Canada. The lady is still at her home in Kanakoo.—Parris Mail.

WASHINGTON, February 8.—The Star of this evening has the following particulars from the front, which represent that we have experienced considerable loss on the return of our troops from the late demonstration. It is stated that some of the pontoons were lost on the Rapidan, whereby the enemy were enabled to pick up some of our men who had not recrossed. It is also stated that a rebel cavalry force, crossing above Morton's Ford, intercepted a couple of our regiments, who were forced to cut their way through with some loss.

LATER.

Parties arriving from the front this morning state that when our troops pushed across at Germania Ford they found the rebel rifle pits in that immediate vicinity occupied by but twenty-five pickets, who threw down their arms and surrendered, stating that there was no rebel force within ten miles. Immediately thereafter our forces pushed ahead in the direction of Orange Court-House, but had hardly progressed two miles when they were opened on from twelve guns. Attacking the rebel force working and supporting these guns, we drove them from their position with considerable loss in killed, wounded and prisoners, our loss in the affair being thirty-five. The mass of our infantry then recrossed the Rapidan, leaving a force to hold the rifle pits first taken until the operations of our cavalry, that had moved by a different route, had terminated. Heavy firing is said to have been heard yesterday, and it was believed about Culpepper that our cavalry was then engaged with the enemy it had been seeking.

The accounts from the South state that the Rebel armies embrace, to-day, more men than at any moment since the commencement of the war, the conscription having been ruthlessly enforced.

The steamer Wm. Wallace has been fired into while on its way from Memphis to Cairo.

It is asserted that the Empress of Austria is in the condition that "woman are in who love their lords." Remarkable!

WESTERN ELOQUENCE.—Western eloquence continues to improve. A Wisconsin reporter sends the following sketch. A lawyer in Milwaukee was defending a handsome young woman, accused of stealing from a large finopopied dwelling, in the night time, and thus he spoke in conclusion:

"Gentlemen of the Jury, I am done.—When I gaze with enraptured eyes on the matchless beauty of this peerless virgin, on whose resplendent charms no vision ever dared to breathe—when I behold her radiant in this glorious bloom of lustrous loveliness, which angelic sweetness might envy but not eclipse—before which the star on the brow of night grows pale, and the diamonds of Brazil are dim—and then reflect upon the sinner mad and folly of supposing that so much beauty would expose itself to the terrors of an empty building, in the cold, damp dead of night, when innocent like hers is hiding itself amidst snowy pillows of repose. Gentlemen of the jury, my feelings are too overpowering for expression, and I throw her into your arms for protection against the foul charges, which the outraged malice of a disappointed scoundrel has invented to blast the fair name of this lovely maiden, whose smiles shall be the reward of the verdict which I know you will give!"

The jury acquitted her without leaving their seats.

Smart Men.

In common parlance the man who gets rich by a series of operations bordering so closely upon fraud that the distinction between the two is a legal rather than a moral difference, is called a smart man. He is admired for his adroitness and envied for his success. But, as a general rule, wealth is of no real use to individuals of this class. Their enjoyment consists mainly in the process of accumulation, not in the result. To out-general, out-wit and hoodwink their fellow men is their darling employment, and the questionable celebrity thus obtained is one of their greatest luxuries. They are proud, too, of their reputation for superior shrewdness; and the sort of worship which people of grovelling instinct record to property, irrespective of the manner in which it is amassed, gives them a sense of importance which is doubtless very agreeable.—They do not apply to themselves the moral standard by which conscientious men measure their acts and motives, but are content to take the opinion of weak and despicable money-worshippers as the true estimate of their character and position.

Such individuals are, we suppose, happy in their way. So are the lower animals. A snake in the act of fascinating its prey, or basking in the sunshine after having gorged it, feels all that a snake can feel of pleasure. But happiness is of different qualities. The higher the moral and intellectual aspirations of the man, the more exalted and intense his sense of enjoyment. Does anybody suppose that Elwes, the miser, experienced, in counting his gold and chuckling over its possession, sensations as delicious as those of Howard while ministering to the sick and destitute; or that the avarice of a speculator, after having made a million of dollars by forcing a rise in a particular stock, is comparable to that of Galileo when he had solved the problem of the Earth's motion, or of Columbus when he beheld from the deck of his caravel the shores of the "New World?"

A time comes to all men, smart or simple when the near approach of the unknown future compels a review of the irrevocable past. When all temporal hopes are at an end, memory asserts itself with wonderful power, and if it presents nothing better than a long record of sordid scheming, a career of success founded on deception and tergiversation, the selfish satisfaction of years will seem to the smart man but a miserable equivalent for the stings of remorse which a single hour's reflection will cause to rankle in his soul. Such smartness does not pay.

The desire to accumulate property is a wholesome desire, if it is regulated by the laws of honor and tempered by the charities of life. Otherwise it is a curse.—He who arrives at the limits of human existence with millions in his exchequer, but with a black balance against him in the book of the Recording Angel, dies a moral pauper, and were it permitted him to speak from the marble purchased by his ill-gotten gold, he would contradict his own obituary notices, and tell the world that "Even here, upon this bank and shoal of time, to say nothing of the life to come, there can be no elevated happiness without honesty of purpose, and a faithful adherence to the 'last and greatest commandment.' There is nothing in the world more true than that a smart knave is essentially both as respects this life and the next—an arrant fool."

Masquerade Ball at the Goddard House in Mayville.

The recent successful exhibition of tableaux in our City, has given additional inspiration to pleasurable and innocent enjoyments among our many friends. One of the most brilliant and interesting pieces produced at the late exhibition at the Court House, was a representation of a MASQUERADE BALL, in which many of the most beautiful and graceful ladies and spirited young gentlemen of the Society, figured with fine effect. This has no doubt stimulated the desire, which we learn is very great, to attend the MASQUERADE BALL, which we understand is designed to come off at the Goddard House in this City on the 24th of February. We learn that very extensive preparations are being made to render this one of the most agreeable and brilliant entertainments of the kind, which has ever been given in this City. From the well known energy and good taste of the amiable and accomplished proprietress of the GODDARD HOUSE, we can promise our friends an evening of unusual pleasure.

We understand that it is the intention of the young folks to have a Ball, the night after the Firemen's Supper, at the new Neptune Hall, on 3rd street.

MARRIED.

In this city, on Monday evening, February 8th, 1864, by Rev. B. F. Sedwick, Mr. Linn GUNN, City Marshal, to Miss NANCY CLARK. On Tuesday evening, Feb. 9th, 1864, by Elder P. B. Wiles, Elder H. B. TAYLOR, of Germantown, to Miss LIZZIE C. LANE, of Mason Co. At the Episcopal Church, in this city, on Tuesday morning, Feb. 9th, 1864, by Rev. F. M. Legg, B. Dukes, of Georgetown, Ky., to Miss ANN ARMSTRONG.

DIED.

In Mason county, Ky., on Wednesday, Feb. 8th, 1864, CHARLES DIMMITT, son of CHAS. E. DIMMITT, aged about nineteen years.

For the Bulletin. Died, at his residence, near Murphysville, Mason county, Ky., Jan. 1st, 1864, of pneumonia, Mr. JAMES CASE, aged about seventy years. At his residence, near Germantown, Bracken county, Ky., Jan. 24th, 1864, of the same disease, Mr. EDWARD CASE, aged about fifty-five. At his residence, near Germantown, Bracken county, Ky., Feb. 2nd, 1864, of the same disease, Mr. JOHN CASE, aged about sixty-seven years. Thus have three brothers been stricken down by the ruthless hand of death, in about one month, each of them leaving a large family, and numerous relatives and friends to mourn their departures. They had all been for many years devoted members of the Baptist Church and consistent and exemplary followers of the meek and lowly Lamb; and as they lived so they died, rejoicing in anticipation of a blissful immortality beyond the grave. May God sanctify this sad dispensation of His Providence, to the spiritual good of their bereaved families, and bring them all by His Grace to meet around His Throne in Heaven, where they shall be separated no more forever. A. C. W.

HEIMSTREET'S INIMITABLE HAIR RESTORATIVE. IT IS NOT A DYE, but restores gray hair to its original color, by supplying the necessary tubercles with natural sustenance, impaired by age or disease. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, destroying the vitality and beauty of the hair, and forcing it to grow no more. Heimstreet's Inimitable Coloring not only restores hair to its natural color by an easy process, but gives the hair a Luxuriant Beauty, promotes its growth, prevents its falling off, eradicates dandruff, and imparts health and pleasantness to the head. It has stood the test of time, being the original Hair Coloring, and is constantly increasing in favor. Used by both gentlemen and ladies. It is sold by all respectable dealers, or can be procured by them of the original agents, D. C. Barnes & Co., 202 Broadway, New-York. Two sizes, 50 cents and $1. [oct17] 6mo.

WYNKOOP'S ICELAND PECTORAL.

Diseases of the Throat, Chest and Pulmonary organs are ever prevalent, insidious and dangerous. The properties of a medicine to alleviate, cure and prevent these complaints, must be expectorant, anodyne and invigorating, loosening the mucus of the throat, and imparting tone to the entire system. No discovery in medical science ever mastered this class of diseases like Dr. Wynkoop's Iceland Pectoral. It is used with the most astonishing results in all cases of Bronchitis, influenza, Whooping Cough, Diphtheria or Putrid Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, Conghs, Colds, Nervous Irritability, &c.

Rev. J. J. Potter certifies, "that I have used Dr. Wynkoop's Pectoral for several years, myself and in my family, for severe Pulmonary Complaints, and have recommended it to many others, and have never seen its equal." Rev. J. J. Potter, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Hundreds and thousands of important testimonials could be produced, showing its remarkable efficacy and that it never fails. It is composed of pure Iceland-Moss, Balm of Gilead, Peruvian Bark, Eucalyptus, Camphor, and other invigorating expectorant and tonic ingredients. It is harmless, prompt and lasting. Invalids and sufferers cannot afford to neglect a trial. Full descriptions, recommendations and directions accompany each bottle. Sold by all principal Druggists. Prepared by Dr. R. D. Wynkoop, and sold by D. C. Barnes & Co. New-York. [oct17] 6mo.

HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM. This is the most delightful and extraordinary article ever discovered. It changes the entire texture of the hair, and imparts a healthy, natural, and beautiful appearance to the scalp. It is used by the most distinguished persons in the city, and is the only article of the kind that is so highly recommended. It is sold by all principal Druggists. Prepared by Dr. R. D. Wynkoop, and sold by D. C. Barnes & Co. New-York. [oct17] 6mo.

MULLINS & HUNT'S NEW

WHOLESALE DRY GOODS STORE!

THE SUBSCRIBERS, LONG ESTABLISHED in a large retail Dry Goods business in Mayville, would call the attention of Country Merchants to their recent addition of an extensive Wholesale Department; which will be conducted on a STRICTLY CASH PRINCIPLE.

The many years of experience possessed by our buyer, combined with a perfect knowledge of the Kentucky trade, a thorough acquaintance with all the Manufacturing and Importing Houses in the East, and the fact of our purchases being made for "Cash," together with a firm determination to sell at a mere commission advance on Eastern Cost, will be sufficient guarantees to CLOSE CASH BUYERS that we cannot be undersold by any WESTERN JOBBING HOUSE.

Our Stock will be found better adapted to the wants of our customers than it is usual to find in the generality of JOBBING HOUSES; as it will embrace a greater variety of goods than is ordinarily met with in an exclusive Wholesale Establishment. The departments allotted to HATS AND CAPS AND

Notions, Will be at all times especially attractive as particular attention will be paid to them, and a LARGE STOCK

Kept constantly on hand. We would impress upon our friends that in sending us orders they may rely upon having them executed to the fullest extent of our ability.

DRAKE'S PLANTATION BITTERS.

They purify, strengthen and invigorate. They create a healthy appetite. They are an antidote to change of water and diet. They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.

They strengthen the system and enliven the mind. They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers. They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.

They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation. They cure Diarrhea, Cholera and Cholera Morbus. They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.

They are the best Bitters in the world. They make weak men strong, and a re-exhausted nature's great restorer. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Cascarella Bark, Dandelion, Chamomile Flowers, Lavender Flowers, Wintergreen, Anise, Clover-buds, Orange Peel, Snake-root, Caraway, Coriander, Burdock, S. - T. - 1860 - X. &c.

The following is a sample of the testimony daily received.

SOLDIERS' HOME, SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, CINCINNATI, O., January 15, 1863.

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble Soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect almost marvellous and gratifying.

Such a preparation as this is heartily wish in every family, in every hospital, and at hand on every battle field.

G. W. D. ANDREWS, Superintendent

WILLARD'S HOTEL, WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 22, 1863.

GENTLEMEN: We require another supply of your Plantation Bitters, the popularity of which daily increases with the guests of our house.

Respectfully, SYKES, CHADWICK & CO.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 8, 1862.

I have been so with Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia that I was compelled to abandon my business. I used three bottles of the Plantation Bitters, and to my astonishment am entirely cured. They are the best medicine I ever used, and I shall endeavor to make them known. Please inform me what S. - T. - 1860 - X. means. Yours truly, H. B. KINGSLEY.

Dr. W. A. Childs, surgeon of the Tenth Vermont Regiment, writes: "I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Bitters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used."
